Duke Academics

At a time when college athletics are under close scrutiny for its academic shortcomings, the Duke athletic program remains a shining example of what can be accomplished with the proper perspective. The commitment to excellence is obvious in all of Duke's sports programs. All of the Blue Devil teams have graduation rates near 100 percent every year. Duke is also well represented on the ACC Honor Roll. For 21 consecutive years, Duke has had the most student-athletes on the conference list, which recognizes athletes who compile at least a 3.0 grade point average for the year.

This past year, Christie McDonald earned NSCAA/adidas Scholar All-America for the second straight season. In 2007, Rachel-Rose Cohen was selected ESPN The Magazine Academic All-America for the second straight year, while Carolyn Ford earned 2005 NSCAA/adidas Academic All-America honors. Duke also had six student-athletes selected to the All-ACC Academic team in 2009-- Kendall Bradley, KayAnne Gummersall, Kelly Hathorn, McDonald, Cody Newman and Lorraine Quinn.

Christie McDonald was selected NSCAA Scholar All-America as a junior and senior.

The Duke administration and the athletic department both embrace the philosophy that receiving a meaningful degree is the primary goal of attending college. As a result, Duke has compiled one of the nation's most impressive reputations for its dedication to excellence on and off the field. Academic Coordinator T.J. Grams helps student-athletes with course selection and monitors their progress toward graduation. Leslie Barnes directs the Blue Devil Career Development Program, which assists student-athletes with the career development process. Duke's Associate Athletic Director Brad Berndt oversees the Blue Devils' academic support program.

An additional asset for the student-athletes is the Michael Krzyzewski Center for Athletic Excellence, which houses a state-of-the-art study center for all Duke student-athletes. The center opened in 2008 and includes a general study area along with computers, individual tutoring rooms, a classroom, resource room and staff offices, which will be open 24 hours a day, seven days a week.

Why has Duke's athletic program excelled on the academic front? In part, the answer lies in the type of student-athletes recruited by Blue Devil coaches and the admissions process itself. One of the chief criteria is the projected ability to graduate, and the coaches make that a priority in recruiting.

But in essence, it all goes back to commitment, to the desire to field a program that features true student-athletes.

At Duke University, the institution remains confident that a distinguished school can play a significant role in intercollegiate athletics, while at the same time developing young adults to lead our world into a new generation and beyond. Student-athletes choosing Duke get the best of both worlds.

The value of Duke's commitment to its athletes can be seen in the careers that many of them choose after college. They are doctors, lawyers, engineers. Some go directly into the job market, while others head to graduate school. Whatever the plans, a Duke degree is an invaluable commodity. That's why choosing a college is not just a four-year decision.

Koskinen Stadium

When people speak of the top soccer facilities in the South and in the nation, Duke's Koskinen Stadium comes to mind. In a relatively short period, the cozy stadium has emerged into one of the finest soccer complexes in the country.

Koskinen Stadium, named and dedicated in 1999 through the support of John and Patricia Koskinen, is situated ideally on Duke University's West Campus. It sits adjacent to the William David Murray Building and near both Wallace Wade Stadium and Cameron Indoor Stadium. This location -- in the heart of Duke's athletic complex -- allows easy access for Duke fans both on campus and throughout the local community.

From a spectator's standpoint, there's not a bad seat in the house as the aluminum bleachers flank each sideline to allow for 4,500 fans with standing room only areas pushing the capacity to approximately 7,000. The Bermuda grass playing surface is 75 yards by 120 yards with an underground irrigation system that keeps it in top condition year round, while lights, added in 1984, have afforded the Blue Devils scheduling flexibility.

Located on the stadium's West side, the press box provides ample room in the divided press area for writers, as well as having adequate space for radio and television crews. Home Team Sports, Fox Soccer Channel, Fox Sports Net as well as other television affiliates have reached a nationwide audience with its coverage of ACC Tournament action from Koskinen Stadium's comfortable vantage.

Renovations continue to improve the facility. Work was completed in 2005 on a field house which features two locker rooms and a viewing deck. In addition, permanent concession stands and restrooms have been added to the comfort of Duke soccer fans. Duke brick around the bleachers, along with stadium fencing, also now enhance Koskinen Stadium.

The facility continues to be the site of numerous prime soccer events, including the Atlantic Coast Conference Men's Soccer Tournament in 1987, 1989, 1990 and 1995. The 1989 ACC Women's Soccer Tournament called the Duke Soccer Stadium home, as did the 1992 and 2000 tournament.

The attendance of 5,273 for the 2000 ACC Women's Soccer Championship between Duke and North Carolina was the largest crowd in the history of women's soccer at Koskinen Stadium

The stadium also serves as the site of one of the South's premier soccer tournaments in the "Duke Nike Soccer Classic", which draws outstanding crowds to watch the nation's top collegiate teams in early-season action. This year on Sept. 18 and 20, Duke welcomes LSU, Auburn and North Carolina.

In 1987, Duke was the soccer competition site for the United States Olympic Festival with the gold medal game playing host to a standing room-only crowd of almost 7,000 spectators.

In 2000, Koskinen Stadium was the host of the ACC Women's Soccer Tournament. The final game between Duke and North Carolina drew the largest crowd (5,273) in the history of Duke women's soccer at Koskinen Stadium. It was also the fifth largest game attendance in a women's soccer game not including the NCAA Tournament and the 16th biggest crowd in Division I women's soccer history.

The Blue Devils have hosted seven NCAA Tournament matches over the past 17 years, including first-round games in 1992, 1996, 1997, 1999, 2000, 2008, and a second-round match-up in 1995. During the spring of 1984, the Blue Devils also hosted the U.S. Olympic Team.

The Blue Devils enjoy their home field advantage. Over the past 21 years, Duke's home record is 123-51-6. The squad is 94-34-10 over the last 15 seasons at home.

The soccer team enjoys the use of its own locker room and meeting room in the Murray Building. Each player has a locker with storage areas for extra equipment at each space. The squad also has the use of a spacious practice field close to the stadium. Enclosed by the woods that surround the Duke Golf Club, this field allows the team to practice on a playing surface other than the game field and provides a private setting for the soccer team to work out.

The Murray Building, which opened in 1986, cost $2.4 million to construct. It not only serves as a home for the lacrosse and soccer offices, this facility also houses the athletic training and weight rooms. The Murray Building recently was renovated with new coaches offices, meeting rooms and trophy displays in 2008.

The modern training room provides all of the equipment and services necessary in keeping the Duke soccer team healthy and in action. Women's soccer trainer Emily Norcross' office is off the main training area, allowing the players convenient access to her care.

The weight room is another extensive area, directed under the watchful eye of strength coordinator Dan Perlmutter. The 3,300 square foot facility boasts over three tons of free weights, along with Nautilus, HydraGym and Universal stations, making it one of the most complete weight rooms in the country.

Blue Devil Alumnae

DUKE WOMEN'S SOCCER ALUMNAE

Few places of higher education have the ability to claim that it encompasses the best combination of academics and athletics. Student athletes at Duke University experience the best in both athletic competition and success in the classroom. Success plays an integral role in the University's culture, and Duke alumni go on to enjoy successful futures in a variety of professional avenues. Several Blue Devil women's soccer alumnae have entered into coaching careers, while others have opted to join the business and professional worlds.

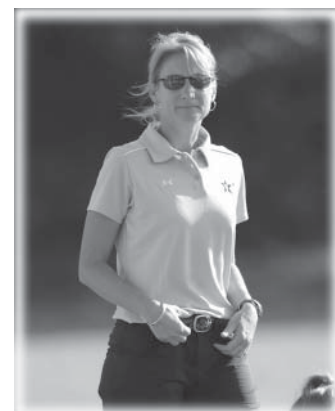

For those alumnae wanting to get reconnected with former teammates, the Blue Devils have created a "Duke Women's Soccer Alumni" group on Facebook where all alumnae can join and catch up with former teammates and meet other former Duke soccer players. Join today!
